

Presentation Skills

Learn how to design and deliver a presentation

So far this week we have covered the importance of study skills and effective note taking. If you haven't already seen this, you can find it on Tuesday's resources.

Also, a huge part of improving your study skills is getting into the right frame of mind, managing your time and your stress levels. We have covered this extensively during our 'wellbeing week' which can be accessed in week 1.

You can also find some helpful links around wellbeing in our signposting page on Friday's resources.

At university you will be assessed in a number of different ways. This includes; exams, essays, practical work, and presentations.

Some people feel absolutely terrified at the very idea of speaking in front of others but being able to give a presentation is a useful skill to take into the workplace - make the most of your opportunity to practise this at university. Remember, you won't be asked to deliver presentations without being given time to prepare so don't panic!

Complete the tutorial below to learn how to design and deliver a presentation

If you'd like to know more about university assessment and learn about our own experiences of delivering presentations at university, get in touch a member of our team here.

We'd love to know if you found this resource helpful, let us know here.